

Born, raised and educated in the UK, Delia Chiaro has spent her academic life in Italy where she is currently Professor of English Language and Translation at the University of Bologna.

Her research has focused on everything and anything that is benignly multi-faceted and incongruous including bilingualism, audiovisual translation, humour and especially a mixture of all three. She has over a hundred publications in the form of articles, book chapters and books as well as having been invited speaker at conferences around the world. Her latest book is The Language of Jokes in the Digital Age that was published by Routledge in 2018. She has been interviewed on her research by the BBC (2018), the journal Mind (2018) and by The Economist (2019).

Her hobbies include food, socializing and socialism.